

How to log in to your site

An important first step!

Step-by-step guide

1. Navigate to <http://XXdev.audubon.org/user> on your site, where XX is your site's subdomain (fl for Florida; pickeringcreek for Pickering Creek center, etc)
2. If you haven't visited in a while (or if this is your first time), you will be prompted with the first of two login screens. It could look like this, but may look slightly different depending on your browser. BOTH the username and password for this first login will always be audubon (in lowercase). So type audubon in both the user name and password fields here.

3. On the second login screen that then appears at /user, login with your Audubon email address (jmahoney@audubon.org) and your Audubon network password that you use for your email. If this screen doesn't appear after you clear the first Log In box, try reloading the page.

4. You will now see the admin control panel bar at the top of the page that confirms you are logged in:

The screenshot shows the top of the Audubon website with an admin control panel. The panel includes links for Content, Structure, Appearance, People, Configuration, and Reports. A user profile is shown as 'jmahoney@audubon.org' with a 'Log out' link. Below the panel, the Audubon logo is visible, along with navigation links for News, Features, Birds, Conservation, Get Outside, and About Us. There are also buttons for 'How to Help', 'Audubon Near You', 'Join', 'Donate', and 'Take Action'.
